

Automotive Trainer / Training Developer (m/w/d)

Job Reference: 12265987

Your tasks:

You'll be part of a small, international team that develops and delivers training programs designed to upskill ISUZU distributors and service teams.

You'll combine your technical knowledge with creativity, communication, and a desire to empower others. This role offers both structure and flexibility — perfect for professionals who enjoy variety, ownership, and collaboration.

A major part of the role involves developing hands-on training materials, with around 30-40 % of the time dedicated to conducting live Train-the-Trainer sessions and creating video tutorials. Travel will be a smaller component of the role about 10 % of working days, including occasional trips to Japan.

- Design and update technical service training for ISUZU distributors, OEMs, and dealers
- Align training content with ISUZU Japan and the European distributor network
- Continuously improving training methods (classroom and digital)
- Support the daily operations of the Training Center (e.g., room setup, welcoming participants)

You should bring:

- A completed qualification as Master Craftsman (Kfz-Meister), State-Certified Technician (staatlich geprüfter KFZ-Techniker), or equivalent
- Practical experience in diagnostics, repair, and service — from a dealership or workshop environment
- A genuine interest in training and education — prior training experience is helpful but not required
- Solid English skills (written and spoken) for developing and delivering training content
- Strong self-organization, curiosity, and a proactive mindset for continuous learning
- You communicate clearly and confidently — and know how to connect with different people, whether they're from other countries or have different technical backgrounds
- A car driver's license is required, and a truck driver's license would be an advantage

What we offer:

- A role in a respected international automotive brand with a clear mission and global perspective
- Purposeful work that directly supports service excellence and mobility across Europe
- Autonomy, trust, and space to develop your own ideas — your input matters here
- A modern, international working environment with colleagues who value diversity, teamwork, and continuous improvement
- Opportunities for career development, upskilling, and collaboration with our training teams in Japan and across Europe
- 30 vacation days, special leave, bike leasing, lunch subsidy, free drinks, fitness center, free parking, and regular training opportunities

We look forward to receiving your detailed application, stating your salary expectations and your earliest possible starting date.
